

For our project, we decided to use a Model-View-Controller (MVC) architectural style. MVC consists of three main components each responsible for their own part of the application implementation. The view encapsulates the frontend, the model represents the business logic, while the controller acts as a link between the two.

